Friday, the 13th, again.

Race suicide is not a leading question in Barre, which reports 128 deaths and 279 births the past year.—Brattleboro Phoenix.

But the educating of them is.

Students of the early history of Barre find most interesting facts interwoven in the article "Methodism in Barre," which The Times is now publishing in its columns. That part of the article covering a period of fifty years is from the pen of the late Rev. J. A. Sherburne, revised by the Rev. W. R. Dayenport, and the story of the last 50 years is written by the Rev. Mr. Davenport who was formerly pastor of Hedding Methodist church of Barre.

Former Vermonters and present Vermonters met about the banquet board at Boston last evening; but they are all Vermonters still, no matter where they may be. This Vermont Association in Boston is a fine thing to keep alive the sentiment for the old state and it furnishes occasions for many happy reunions of the Vermont family which is now located in and about Boston. De-sides these banquets and reunions at intervals the association conducts a club to which all Vermonters are invited, whether they are resident members or merely visitors to the Hub. In this way the ties between present and former Vermonters are kept strong. And may the same spirit always pervade and grow more powerful.

BENEFIT OF FARMER'S CONVENTIONS.

If we were to pass judgment, from an outside view, of the conventions of the State Sugar Makers' and the State Dairymen's Associations just held at Montpelier, we should say that both meetings have been of very great benefit to the sugar makers and the dairymen—which means the farmers. At these conventions one gets the highest and most progressive ideas in connection with the craft. Here are brought together the most successful agriculturalists of the state. Here these agriculturalists disseminate their knowledge of the conditions and needs of Vermont farm land, in their casual conversation with their neighbors and in the discussions of the subjects laid down in the programmes of the conventions. Then, too, there are brought before the assembled delegates some of the most noted students of scientific farming in this section of the country, to speak on subjects of a practical nature and of direct interest to our own farmers. These speakers bring in new ideas and they strengthen the hold on the old and good ideas. They help to share the progressive policy. It may take time for the new ideas to become established but the seeds are planted, which will eventually germinate and bear splendid results. So we say that these gatherings cannot fail to be of very great moment to those directly interested. That the two conventions this week were successful is quite apparent. They were largely attended as one can judge by the fact that the joint banquet held Wednesday evening was laid for 350 covers. And it is probable that that number does not fully represent the total attendance. There were many from the immediate territory about Washington county to receive the benefit of the business sessions, who did not attend the banquet. It is a decided gain for any section of the state to be privileged to be the meeting place of conventions of this nature, and this section should be, and is, benefitted accordingly.

Out of Order.

Teacher Bug—Willy Bee, I'll send you home if you don't stop humming in class!—New York Evening Journal.

JINGLES AND JESTS.

The Safe Method.
The prophet finds in every clime
Some measure of reproach and woe.
Lucky the man who hides his time
And then remarks, "I told you so."
—Washington Star.

Unfamiliar Ground.
"He told me when I spoke to him yesterday he was lost in thought."
"I should think he would feel that way."
—Buffalo News.

Not Even That.
"It's a fact that the only secret a woman can keep is her age."
"And there you're wrong. That isn't a secret. She only thinks it is."
—Philadelphia Press.

Soup Appetite.
A glutton in hot Guadaloupe
Did nothing but gobble down soup.
He let out a bawl:
"Say, this spoon is too small!
For heaven's sake, bring me a coupe."
—Columbia Jester.

Just So.
Lady—Give you an old newspaper as a bed? Why, what kind of a bed would you call a newspaper?
